ABSTRACT

The De Anza Reading Center is a California Demonstration Program for intensive instruction in reading at the junior high school level that was originally modeled after the successful program developed at Santa Barbara Junior High School. Operating since January of 1973, each project group receives instruction in the Reading Center for two years--as seventh and eighth graders. All students at the project grade level participate in heterogeneous classes regardless of their reading levels and abilities. The objective is to help every student become a better reader and a more responsible person by increasing the reading achievement and improving the self concept of each student. As outlined in the proposal, the project was to include 12 major components and 8 specific objectives. The evaluation of these twenty items is contained within this report. The appendices include a parent questionnaire with parental comments and suggestions, parental interviews and comments, and student interviews and comments. (PN)

Overview of the Project

INTRODUCTION

The De Anza Reading Center is a California Demonstration Program for intensive instruction in reading at the junior high school level that was originally modeled after the successful program developed at Santa Barbara Junior High School. The Center has been operating since January of 1973 when the first group of seventh graders began participating in the program. Each project group receives instruction in the Reading Center for two years--as seventh and eighth graders. All students at the project grade level participate in heterogeneous classes regardless of their reading levels and abilities. The objective is to help every student become a better reader and a more responsible person.

Since the project began, five groups have successfully completed the program with eighth graders going on to high school in 1974, 1976, 1978, 1980 and 1982. All students participate in the program on a rotational basis from their science classes or from the E.S.L. English class. While a variety of approaches and materials are used within the Center, the major instructional strategies include:

1. A supportive, non-threatening environment emphasizing individual progress and success.
2. A diagnostic/prescriptive approach to individualized instruction and learning on a contract basis.
3. A low pupil/teacher ratio with Reading Teachers and trained Instructional Aides available to give almost instant help and support when it is needed.
4. A wide variety of high interest, multi-sensory materials and methods in an attempt to meet the needs of all learning styles and rates.
5. A program designed for all levels of reading - remedial, corrective and developmental.

As outlined in the proposal, the project was to include twelve major components and eight specific objectives. The evaluation of these twenty items is contained within this report.

COMPONENTS

I. Diagnosis of Individual Problems:

Basic to the De Anza reading program is the diagnosis of strengths and weaknesses in reading of each participating student. To formulate a diagnosis the Center staff utilized a variety of testing instruments including a visual, auditory and general health screening to rule out physical problems which might interfere with reading.

Achievement testing is required of all Demonstration Programs. The Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills (CTBS) is the standardized achievement test used to measure reading gains in the program. Students are pre-tested in October and post-tested in May so that the achievement of the various programs may be evaluated and compared.

Diagnostic tools used by the De Anza Reading Center include the Slosson Drawing Coordination Test, Stanford Diagnostic Reading Tests, the Classroom Reading Inventory (Silvaroli), an informal Diagnosis of Reading Skills, as well as self concept tests and an interest inventory. The Reading Center also uses diagnostic tools that are available with specific instructional programs. For example, criterion referenced tests and other placement tests may be used with "Audio Reading Progress Laboratory," "Learning 100," "Reach, and System 80 Programs. In addition, other informal tests and inventories are administered as needed to pinpoint specific interests and needs in skill areas.

II. Prescription of Activities to Eliminate Identified Problems:

After diagnostic testing is completed, the Reading Center teachers write a prescription for each student. In this prescription the strengths are analyzed and the appropriate remedial, developmental and/or enrichment activities are recommended.

The teachers translate this prescription into a specific course of study by means of a Contract negotiated between the teachers and pupils. The students' needs, abilities, interests, likes and dislikes are taken into account and they are told the purpose of each type of lesson that is assigned.

The Contract is designed as a twenty-five day plan of study and the students are expected to do an average of two lessons a day for ten points to earn a minimum of 250 points within the life of the Contract plus 30 points for independent reading which is done outside of class. Each student has twenty-five working days on the Contract, so absences extend the completion date to allow everyone comparable time. Students may earn additional points by completing extra lessons and reading more extensively. At the completion of each Contract, a formal evaluation of the student's progress is made by both the teacher and the student. A Contract Evaluation Form is filled out by the students on which they note two things they have learned, which reading skills they still need to work on, which lessons they found most helpful and which was the favorite lesson.

Most pupils are quite honest about analyzing their strengths and weaknesses, and their comments along with their progress charts help the teacher and the student plan the next Contract to their mutual satisfaction.

III. Individualized and Small Group Instruction:

Since all students work on a Contract basis and a wide variety of materials are used, the Center could not function in any other manner. Students are always working individually or in small groups.

IV. An Individual Student Record of Skills Mastered:

Progress is recorded daily on the individual Contract (see II above). Both students and teachers are always aware of what they are doing and where they are on a particular unit of work.

V. Flexible Scheduling and Flexible Class Size for Reinforcement and Extension of Reading Skills in Content Areas:

Students participate in the Reading Center for approximately half of each school year. They come into the Center from their science classes for a period of three weeks. At the end of the three week period Group One returns to science and Group Two comes to the Reading Center. This type of rotation continues throughout the year: half of the students are in science classes and half of them are in the Reading Center; then they exchange places. Some students have been in the Center full time for a trimester or even for the entire year if it seemed the best way to meet the student's needs. Each situation is carefully considered to plan an appropriate course of action for students as individuals. During 1982-83 all LEP/NEP students were scheduled in full time to help them develop greater facility with the English language.

Materials in the Center have been used to support content areas. The major emphasis has been in social studies, English, sports, careers, English as a Second Language and counseling.

VI. Cooperative Teaching of Reading:

The Reading Center teachers and aides must work cooperatively in order for the Reading Center to function. The staff works as a team in planning instructional strategies, analyzing student behavior, and evaluating the impact of the program on both staff and students. In addition, the science teachers work cooperatively with the Reading Center staff as they both seek to provide personalized instruction for students.

VII. Guidance and Counseling Program 1982-1983:

The Reading Center Counselor works with students on an individual and small group basis to supplement and reinforce the work of other staff members. The focus in counseling this year has been on academic achievement in reading. This is a continuation of the emphasis on academic and social effectiveness begun in the 1980-81 school year, but expanded to involve students in formulating an "action plan" for positive change. Working in Group Counseling sessions and individually with students, the project counselor asks students to identify and set specific reading and behavioral goals especially in regard to completing Reading Center homework and book reports. She then helps each student develop an action plan to implement positive change. For example, academic action plans might include doing math homework every night, writing a paragraph for English twice a week or studying spelling words for fifteen minutes daily, etc. A behavioral plan might include getting to class on time, using instructional time more productively, eliminating unnecessary talk, or learning how to contribute to a group discussion. Consequently, students were actually putting into practice the human relations and academic skills they were learning.

Group Counseling sessions emphasize human interaction skills which are sharpened and tested within the group situation. The Human Relations goals enable students to practice specific objectives. These involve positive social skills, goal setting, values clarification, career awareness, problem solving, and leadership in discussion. In addition, the counselor is directly involved in the instructional process by being available for book reports, informal talks with students, helping set academic goals, and working daily with the E.S.L. and non English speaking students in instructional groups. Counseling continues to be a vital component and an integral part of the reading program.

The following are overall statistics which indicate the emphasis on effectiveness for this year as well as the on-going emphasis on fostering positive self esteem:

1. Individual counseling sessions (saw each student at least 2 times) .. 1000
2. Group counseling (conducted 9 student groups for total of 72 sessions involving 90 students in groups)
3. Counselor orientation sessions .. 10
4. Daily instruction of non English proficiency students (Spanish speaking)
5. Provided 8 group counseling sessions for all seventh grade LEP/NEP students
6. Dissemination workshops, classes, discussions, and presentations .. 7
7. Conferences with parents: telephone and visit .. 250
8. Conferences with teachers .. 100
9. Dissemination: Distributed brochures on the counseling program to parents and students in both English and Spanish.

10. Dissemination of five separate counseling booklets through workshops, to visitors and through the mail.

VII. Development and Production of Reading Materials

The De Anza Reading Center uses a wide variety of high interest materials to meet the needs of junior high students. Because such a wealth of materials has been developed in recent years, the Center primarily uses commercial materials to provide an eclectic approach to reading. The staff has developed some reading materials such as word cards, stories and games, but this is not a major thrust of the program.

VIII. Dissemination:

The Reading Center staff is responsible for writing and/or revising dissemination materials. During the 1982-83 school year, the emphasis was on developing materials that would help providers of educational services understand the key components of the Futureprint reading program and the requirements for adapting the program in their own schools. Two new booklets were written: Futureprint - A Reading Program for Junior High Students and Futureprint Evaluation Handbook. Several other materials were developed such as a Description of Dissemination Publications, a packet of Student Forms, Counseling Information Sheets, Project Profile, Needs Assessments for potential adopters, Time Line, Planning Form and Site Visitation Check List.

The Project staff has written several booklets, workshop packets and two awareness brochures to disseminate information about major components of the program. These were distributed widely throughout California at Demonstration Programs Conferences, reading workshops and inservice sessions, college classes and to site visitors.

Following is a list of the De Anza Reading Center's dissemination booklets, materials and packets:

Dissemination through the National Diffusion Network

In June, 1982, the Demonstration Reading Program at De Anza was validated by the Joint Dissemination Review Panel in Washington, D.C. as an exemplary educational program. In October, 1982, Futureprint was funded by the United States Department of Education as a developer/demonstrator in the National Diffusion Network. As a member of the N.D.N., the De Anza Reading Center has the responsibility of disseminating information about its program nationally and providing inservice training and follow-up assistance to schools that adopt or adapt its program. The project supplied awareness materials to state facilitators in all fifty states and complete packages of all materials available from the program to thirty-five states. In addition, the project responded to hundreds of requests for information and materials.

IX. Demonstrations

The Demonstration Reading Program at De Anza Junior High is responsible for demonstrating components of the program for educators within Ontario-Montclair, in neighboring districts, in the state of California and throughout the United States. The staff takes this commitment seriously, devoting considerable time and effort to demonstration and dissemination.

Visitors are always welcome at De Anza. During 1982-83 the project was visited by 65 educators from twenty-five different school districts. In addition, 123 parents and members of the local community visited the program during the year, and an average of twenty adults attended the Reading Center in the evening to improve their reading and/or to become more fluent in English.

Demonstrations were given to schools, school districts, college classes, community groups and professional groups at workshops and inservice sessions. Presentations were made for the following groups:

1. Graduate classes, University of La Verne and Azusa Pacific University
2. School Advisory Council, De Anza
3. De Anza Parents
4. Alta Loma Junior High School - Content Area Workshop
5. Educational Leadership Seminar, Anaheim
6. Fitz Intermediate School Parents - Santa Ana
7. Lone Hill Intermediate - San Dimas - Content Area Workshop
8. Foothill Council - I.R.A.

9. Ontario-Montclair teachers and administrators
10. Teachers and administrators from West Covina, Alta Loma, San Diego, Ramona, Glendora, Cucamonga, Chino, La Verne, San Bernardino, El Dorado, Upland and Yucaipa

Demonstration Programs Conferences:

In addition to the presentations listed above, the De Anza Reading Center staff participated in two Demonstration Programs Conferences in Chico and San Diego. The staff presented five workshops at the Northern Demonstration Conference in Chico: One "Diagnosis -- The Starting Point," two "De Anza's Design for Reading," an overview, and two "Communicating Content Ideas with Reading-Thinking Strategies."

The entire staff attended the Southern Demonstration Programs Conference in San Diego presenting eight workshops: two overview, two management system, three counseling and one content ideas. In addition, the staff prepared a display booth which was manned throughout the conference to provide information about De Anza's reading program, distribute our booklets and display samples of instructional materials.

National Diffusion Network Presentations:

To fulfill its commitment to disseminate the Futureprint reading program throughout the United States, the Reading Center staff made forty-four presentations at professional conferences in ten states outside of California. Awareness sessions were presented for the following groups:

- Chapter I Conference - Gatlinburg, Tennessee
- Language Arts Coordinator - Greensboro, North Carolina
- State Facilitators - Washington, D.C.
- Montana Association of Elementary School Principals - Helena, Montana
- Intermediate Exemplary Programs Conference - Oahu, Kauai, Maui, Hawaii
- Secondary Reading and Writing Conference - Minneapolis, Minnesota
- New Educational Programs That Work Awareness Conference - Seattle, Spokane, Washington
- 1983 Promises in Education Conference - Austin, Texas
- N.D.N. Awareness Conference - Great Falls, Montana
- N.D.N. Awareness Conference - Bismark, North Dakota
- N.D.N. Awareness Conference - Atlanta, Georgia

In addition, teachers from five school districts in Montana attended a day and a half training session in order to be prepared to implement the Futureprint reading program in their own schools.

Replication

The De Anza staff provided assistance, inservice and consultation for schools that replicate, adapt or adopt portions of the De Anza program. Forty-two schools have replicated one or more components of De Anza's.

design for reading, and fifty-three schools have made changes in their reading programs since visiting De Anza.

The De Anza staff appreciates the opportunity to be of service to educators and is gratified to learn that many ideas, components and publications of the De Anza program are being adapted throughout the United States and as far away as Guam and New Zealand.

- X. Every year the Reading Center plans inservice sessions to provide opportunities for professional growth for the staff. During 1982-83 the staff participated in the following inservice sessions:

Writing Inservice

The Reading Center staff participated in a half day writing inservice presented by the De Anza English Department. This was part of the S.I.P. plan for the 1982-83 school year. The purpose of the inservice was to explain how writing skills are being taught in the English classes and to explore how writing skills might be incorporated throughout the curriculum.

Self Review Training

The Reading Center staff participated in Self Review training presented by Lila Chick, Ontario-Montclair School District evaluator from the office of Educational Support Services. The purpose of the training was to acquaint the staff with the self review process as it relates to the School Improvement Plan. The beginning process exams the methodology of education. This was the first of several workshops. The eventual goal is to have each teacher do his/her own self review and/or participate in a school-wide review.

District Curriculum Continuum

This inservice was presented by Lucille Robinson to acquaint the staff with the continuum of skills developed by the district teachers. The staff was encouraged to offer input regarding possible changes and was then asked to indicate how the identified skills are being taught in each curricular area.

District Minimum Day

The Ontario-Montclair School District provided a minimum day inservice for all teachers. The reading center teachers attended the section given by Dr. J. David Cooper on Steps in Accounting for Reading Needs in the Content Area. Emphasis was on vocabulary development, establishing student's background, guided reading and follow-up.

Woodcock Reading Mastery Tests

Barbara Salyer, Reading Center teacher, presented an inservice session to the Reading Center staff on the administration, scoring and evaluation of the Woodcock Reading Mastery Tests. The instructional staff will be using this instrument on a trial basis to diagnose the reading needs of students who are determined to require an individual diagnostic test.

Review of new materials

Whenever the staff ordered a new instructional material, it was presented to the group to familiarize everyone with the format, purpose, interest level and correct use.

Participation in workshops and conferences

Members of the staff participated in the following conferences and workshops:

- California Reading Association
- Claremont Reading Conference
- Asilomar Conference for Project Directors
- Foothill Council Conference
- Demonstration Programs Conferences
- N.D.N. Regional Conference
- N.D.N. National Conferences

XI. Rewards for Students Showing Evidence of Improvement:

Books and posters were awarded at the end of each contract according to the points earned. A minimum of 280 points are required within twenty-five days to be eligible for a reward. Most students completed three contracts during the year thus receiving at least three prizes, and many students earned more than 100 extra points on their contracts, thus earning an additional reward.

This year the De Anza School staff had an awards assembly at the conclusion of each trimester to emphasize the importance of academic growth. Each teacher selected two students from each class to honor as the most outstanding and the most improved in each academic or elective area. As a result the Reading Center honored at least thirty students each trimester or ninety throughout the year. Furthermore, each year De Anza students are recognized for a variety of accomplishments at the annual Awards Assembly. The Reading Center staff decided to recognize three students in each category. The following students were honored:

Most Outstanding Reader: Laura Donahoe (Mrs. Caplan)
Doris Bosco (Mrs. Larson)
Stacey Allen (Ms. Salyer)

Outstanding Progress: Tom Smith (Mrs. Caplan)
Raul Sandoval (Mrs. Larson)
Juanita Barajas (Ms. Salyer)

PART II

Results of the Program's Specific Objectives

DE ANZA READING CENTER

INTRODUCTION

The De Anza Reading Center is committed to two basic goals:

- To increase the reading achievement of each student
- To improve the self concept of each student.

Seven specific objectives have been identified by the Reading Center staff to meet these two goals. The following objectives are included in the program design for the 1982-83 school year:

- OBJECTIVE 1 - The mean gain for the regular project students enrolled in the De Anza Junior High School will be at least 1.2 months reading achievement for each month in the program as measured by the CTBS.
- OBJECTIVE 2 - At the end of the 1982-83 school year the mean score of the target students in attendance 80% or more of the project school days, will demonstrate they will score at least as well as children at the grade level in other parts of the state as measured by their reading grade equivalent score on the CTBS.
- OBJECTIVE 3 - Selected students will indicate a positive change in self concept as measured by a locally selected self-concept test.
- OBJECTIVE 4 - The instructional component of the project will provide personalized instruction through the diagnosis of each student's reading needs and learning characteristics and the prescription of alternative validated activities for each required learning objective with appropriate screening and mastery test items as evidenced by project records of diagnostic test scores, student contracts, and project reports.
- OBJECTIVE 5 - Each teacher, auxiliary personnel, para-professional, and administrator involved directly in the operation of the Reading Center will possess the skills specified for his/her role in the program and/or will acquire those deemed necessary to fully function within the Reading Center according to the demands of his/her specific position.
- OBJECTIVE 6 - Parents of participating students will perceive the reading program as good for project children and good for the community, as reflected by a majority of positive responses on a locally developed instrument.
- OBJECTIVE 7 - The District Board of Trustees will perceive the reading program as worthy of continuation and implementation within the school district as evidenced by Board action.

ANALYSIS OF SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES

The evaluation of the De Anza Reading Center program focuses primarily on the first objective, improvement in reading achievement. Student test scores and other data verify improvement in vocabulary and comprehension skills for project participants. The following report analyses each project objective and presents supportive data that proves the attainment of each.

OBJECTIVE 1

The mean gain for the regular project students enrolled in the De Anza Junior High School will be at least 1.2 months reading achievement for each month in the program as measured by the CTBS.

The Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills (CTBS) was administered to project participants in September 1982 and May 1983. Two hundred ninety-nine (299) seventh graders completed both the pre and post administrations of Form S, level 3 of this test. The following table reports a comparison of these two tests:

MEAN GAIN IN MONTHS FROM SEPTEMBER 1982 to MAY 1983
FOR PROJECT STUDENTS IN DE ANZA READING CENTER

N:	Test	Pre	Post	Gain
299	CTBS S/3	5.7	8.0	2.3

The objective was to gain 1.2 months for each month of instruction or 8.4 months during the seven month teaching period between October 1, 1982 and May 1, 1983. The total reading pretest mean score for the project participants was 5.7 and the posttest mean score is 8.0. A comparison of these two scores reflects a gain of 23 months or 3.2 months for each month in the program. The objective was to gain 8.4 months and the actual gain was 23 months, therefore, the objective was exceeded in excess of twice the amount stated.

To further explore the effectiveness of the De Anza Reading Center for project participants, the Vocabulary and Comprehension sections of the Reading Subtest of the CTBS were analyzed. This analysis is reported in the following table:

COMPARISON OF PRE & POST SCORES READING SUBTEST - CTBS S/3
SEPTEMBER 1982 - MAY 1983

*(Scores are Scale Scores/Grade Equivalents.)

N=299	PRE SS/GE* (Std.Dev.)	POST SS/GE* (Std.Dev.)	GAIN SS/GE*
VOCABULARY	461/5.8 (93.8)	532/8.1 (91.4)	71/2.3
COMPREHENSION	461/5.3 (98.9)	526/7.8 (93.7)	65/2.5
TOTAL READING	456/5.7 (89.7)	523/8.0 (85.8)	67/2.3

The data would indicate that although project students achieved a slightly higher score in the Vocabulary sections of the reading subtest (8.1) than in the Comprehension section (7.8), there was a greater gain made in Comprehension (25 months vs. 23 months for Vocabulary). Overall, students achieved a 23 month gain over seven months of instruction or 3.2 months growth for each month in the program.

At the end of the 1982-83 school year, the mean score of the target students in attendance 80% or more of the project school days will demonstrate that they will score at least as well as children at the grade level in other parts of the state as measured by their reading grade equivalent score on the CTBS.

Three hundred forty (340) students took the post test in May 1983. Of these students two hundred ninetyfour (294) attended at least 80% of the class sessions. The raw scores of these students were averaged, converted to grade equivalent scores and compared with those of the publisher's norming group for that grade level. The following table reports these results:

COMPARISON OF CTBS S/3 MAY SCORES OF DE ANZA
SEVENTH GRADERS AND PUBLISHERS NORMING GROUP

GROUP	RAW SCORE	GRADE EQUIVALENT
DE ANZA STUDENTS	51	7.8
PUBLISHERS GROUP	50	7.7

The data presented above would indicate that De Anza's students perform as well as other students of the same grade and age level nationwide. This objective was met.

Selected students will indicate a positive change in self-concept as measured by a locally selected self-concept test.

All project students were administered the Self Concept Semantic Differential (Schwartz & Langri, 1965) in October 1982. On this instrument, students were asked to check on a scale of 1 to 7, how they felt they rated between the positive (1) and the negative (7) attributes. There are eight attributes to be rated and three like/hate statements. The higher the total score, the lower the self concept.

Twentynine (29) students (15 boys and 14 girls) who received scores indicative of a poor self concept were selected for further attention and study. These same students were administered the Self Concept Differential in May and their scores were matched. The mean scores of these 29 students was compared on a pre-post basis. The number of students who improved were also calculated. To further develop a profile for these students, three specific criteria were studied. Like Myself/Hate Myself, Like to Read/Hate to Read, and Good Reader/Poor Reader were assessed. The table below displays these data:

SELF CONCEPT SEMANTIC DIFFERENTIAL

N=29	Pre Mean	Post Mean	Gain
Total Scales	42.5	32.6	9.9
Like Myself/Hate Myself	3.1	2.3	.8
Like to Read/Hate to Read	3.9	2.9	1.1
Good Reader/Poor Reader	4.1	3.7	.4

The above data reflects a positive change of 9.9 points from pre to post for the total group of twentynine selected students. When specific categories were isolated the change was minimal. However, it would appear that the student's perception of himself and reading realized greater gains than whether he felt he was a good or bad reader. It is interesting to note that the gains were considerably greater for the Like/Hate to Read category. From this sample one could predict that as a student's total perception of himself improves, his feelings toward reading improve also.

CHANGE OF SELF CONCEPT

N=29

Group	Improved		Same		Declined
	N	%	N	%	N	%
Boys	13	87	0	0	2	13
Girls	11	79	1	7	2	14
Total	24	83	1	3	4	14

There was a positive change in self concept for 24 of the 29 selected students (83%). Eighty seven percent (87%) of the boys and 79% of the girls selected made these gains.

The data reported in the two tables presented above indicate that this objective has been met.

The instructional component of the project will provide personalized instruction through the diagnosis of each student's reading needs and learning characteristics and the prescription of alternative validated activities for each required learning objective with appropriate screening and mastery test items as evidenced by project records of diagnostic test scores, student contracts, and project reports.

One of the strengths of the De Anza Reading Center is its instructional management system. Students are administered several diagnostic assessments to determine their strengths and weaknesses. Reading activities are prescribed for each student based upon this individualized diagnosis. The student works from a contract which lists the daily activities geared to the student's needs. These contracts are monitored daily as to quantity, quality, and mastery.

Student interviews and evaluator observations support the fact that the individualized, personalized approach is in effect on a consistent basis. This objective has been fully met.

OBJECTIVE 5

Each teacher, auxiliary personnel, para-professional, and administrator involved directly in the operation of the Reading Center will possess the skills specified for his/her role in the program and/or will acquire those deemed necessary to fully function within the Reading Center according to the demands of his/her specific position.

All Reading Center personnel was made aware of new techniques, materials, and research in the field of reading. They were inserviced in the use of new diagnostic tests, evaluation of new reading materials, and student reading needs in the content areas.

Specific attention was given to the methods utilized by all members of the Reading Center staff in working with students. The evaluator observed these skills during on-site visitations and found the staff to be highly qualified for carrying out the assignments and demands of his/her position.

OBJECTIVE 6

Parents of participating students will perceive the reading program as good for project children and good for the community, as reflected by a majority of positive responses on a locally developed instrument.

A random sample of parents were selected for telephone interviews. Of the original 36 names selected, contact was made with 50% (18) of them. Of the other 50%, several telephone numbers were no longer in service or after repeated attempts to contact them there was still no response. The same ten questions were asked each parent.

Since the number of telephone contacts were so few, a questionnaire was sent to the parents of the project participants. One hundred twenty (120) parents responded to the survey. The questionnaire consisted of nine (9) questions, seven of which were the same as those asked parents in the telephone interviews.

The following table reports the seven questions common to both surveys and the percentage of yes responses for each group.

PERCENTAGE OF POSITIVE RESPONSES TO PARENT SURVEYS

Parents Interviewed = 18

Parent Questionnaires = 120

	Interviews	Questionnaires
1. Do you feel you have adequate information about the reading program?	78%	72%
2. Do you understand the program?	50%	77%
3. Has your child improved in reading since he/she has been a student at De Anza?	83%	85%
4. Does your child read on a regular basis at home?	78%	63%
5. Have you been satisfied with your child's reading grades?	83%	78%
6. Has your child's attitude toward reading improved?	78%	67%
7. How does your child feel about the Reading Center program?
Very helpful	55%	45%
Somewhat helpful	12%	43%
Not helpful	17%	5%
No response	17%	7%

It can be noted from the data above that a majority of both groups of parents feel that they have been adequately informed about the reading program and understand what the Center is doing for students. Overall the responses of the parents interviewed and surveyed indicated a positive perception of the reading program at De Anza. A complete report of both surveys can be found in the Appendix. (See Appendix) Parents did perceive the reading program as being good for their child as reported above. This objective was met.

OBJECTIVE 7

The District Board of Trustees will perceive the reading program as worthy of continuation and implementation within the school district as evidenced by Board action.

The Board of Trustees has supported the State Demonstration Reading Program at De Anza and Imperial Junior High Schools and has authorized their continuation on a yearly basis. In addition, the Board has authorized the project to be nationally disseminated through the National Diffusion Network.

The following excerpt is from the minutes of the Regular Meeting of the Board of Trustees:

DE ANZA READING CENTER

COUNSELING COMPONENT

The focus for 1982-83 of the Reading Center Counseling Component has been on academic achievement in reading. Two of the ten questions asked the parent by the evaluator during the telephone interviews and one of the questions asked during the student interviews were about the counseling program. The following tables report the results of these questions:

PARENT INTERVIEW
RESPONSES TO COUNSELING QUESTIONS

QUESTIONS	YES	NO
Are you aware that your child has or will have the opportunity to have group and individual counseling?	17%	83%
Would you like more information about our counseling program?	78%	22%

It would appear from the above data that even though the project counselor has made numerous parent contacts, sent brochures to the students' homes in both English and Spanish, and conducted group and individual counseling sessions, the parents still have not connected the counseling program with the Reading Center. In speaking to parents, the evaluator determined that many parents thought the project counselor and the school counselor were the same and/or had the same role.

STUDENT INTERVIEW
RESPONSES TO COUNSELING QUESTIONS

Do you feel you can talk with the project counselor if you need or want to do so?
GROUP	N	YES	NO
I	43	88%	12%
II	44	82%	18%

A large percentage of the students interviewed felt comfortable with talking with the project counselor. Those who expressed reluctance indicated that they did not know her, had no reason to speak to her, or did not share their problems or feelings with anyone.

DE ANZA READING CENTER

CONCLUSIONS

The De Anza Junior High School Reading Center met or exceeded each of the seven specific project objectives that are part of their program design for 1982-83. Project participants made 23 months gain on the reading subtest of the CTBS S/3 during the seven months of instruction, October 1982 - May 1983.

Parents reported that the program had been effective for their children. Students indicated that their reading abilities had improved, they felt better about themselves in general, and they no longer hated to read.

Overall, evaluation data provide convincing evidence that De Anza Reading Center has produced educationally significant results during the 1982-83 school year.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The De Anza Reading Center staff has indicated a desire to supplement the Classroom Reading Inventory (Nicholas J. Silveroli, 1965) with the Woodcock Reading Mastery Tests (Richard W. Woodcock, 1973) for the individual assessment of the low achieving reader. It is recommended that project personnel evaluate the effectiveness of this new instrument in appropriately diagnosing and placing both new and returning students and determine the accuracy of the test in assessing the strengths and weaknesses of the student.

7TH GRADE PARENT QUESTIONNAIRE

Question #3 COMMENTS - Do you feel that your son/daughter has improved in reading since he/she has been a student at De Anza?

- In comprehension and vocabulary.
- Last year she never did her work.
- John loves the center. He feel positive about his work and is stimulated to do more.
- Her grade level has improved.
- These questions are very difficult for me to answer because my daughter has always been an avid reader. I will be highly interested in seeing what it does for my next year's junior high student who is slightly below grade level.
- I know he doesn't read like he should.
- She used to love to read, seemed to get away from it awhile and is now back to reading again because of book reports due or whatever. Its great!!
- I would have liked more information on the "contracts".
- Very much thanks for helping him.
- Yes, she has improved a lot. (2 responses)
- Did not know there was not even a reading program going on.
- Any type of organized reading program is appreciated.
- Every day homework please.
- No, I feel she has not progressed at all since going to De Anza.
- He seems to understand what he reads a lot better.
- Laura has really enjoyed the center and has come home many a day and talked about it.
- Reads more novels at spare times for entertainment now.
- He has not been in the program long enough to really know.
- Yes, he has improved somewhat.
- Cannot tell any difference.
- Owen has always been a good reader.
- His reading skills have improved because of the reading program.
- I answered "no" on the first two because I did not receive information. I guess this is my fault because I could not attend any of the meetings this year.

Question #5 COMMENTS - The reading center has given your student a letter grade on his/her report card. The grade is based on points earned in class and books read at home. Have you been satisfied with your student's grades?

- She could be doing better. (4 responses)
- It has made John more aware of the joys of reading (comic strips, short articles, etc.)
- I was not aware that books read at home earned anything. My child has always loved to read and has a lot of books.
- Very much so. She has really been trying hard and we are proud of her.
- I know its also my son's attitude.
- Except for a deficiency note sent home that I felt was unjustifiable!
- At least he is doing better than last year.
- She got a good grade, that satisfies me.
- Would like to see her read more but am unwilling to push too much.
- He never brought homework home.
- John also reads aloud at home 2 to 3 hours a week.

DE ANZA READING CENTER
PARENT QUESTIONNAIRE COMMENTS

Question #5 (continued)

- I think Veronica has done really well in reading and understanding what she reads.
- My daughter has not been in De Anza very long.
- Mynk has always enjoyed reading - the program has helped he somewhat to retain what she's read.
- Not really. Considering his capabilities in reading, I feel he has been graded low.
- But I feel he still could do better with a little more effort.
- I cannot answer this question because I do not remember seeing any report card.
- I believe there is always room for improvement; I am referring to Rosita's report card. (Translated from Spanish questionnaire.)

COMMENTS AND SUGGESTIONS FROM PARENTS

- Explanation of where student is leveled, strong points, weak points.
- More time in the reading center would do better. Thank you very much.
- I'm sure this program is good, if our son would use what he has learned.
- Whatever you're doing is working for Dawn. She is more enthused about books and stories and reads for fun not just homework. Thank you.
- Inform the parent that it is going on and let the parent know if he is going to have homework. Rodney has not brought one thing home for reading.
- Inform parents of what is required each trimester. Kids don't let parents know anything.
- Separate the class into two groups, putting the better readers into one group and slower groups with teachers helping more in the latter group.
- Every child is different. Nacio has had trouble in school since he was little. We at home have tried and still try to help him. I guess he does not like reading because of his past experiences that people made fun of him because he could not read. I think that Nacio could do better if he really understood and he felt comfortable with the person teaching him. He has learned to hide his problems very good and he doesn't trust no one. He doesn't want to open up because he thinks that if he does people are going to make fun of him. I do not know if I'm making any sense. I know Nacio is very insecure but he doesn't let anyone know. I wish I could talk more and I regret that we (the family) could not attend any of your meetings.
- I feel the reading center is well off and feel that my son is doing a lot better with it than without. Thank you.
- I would like to see the program expanded to include speed reading for top readers, rather than offering the class as an elective. This would be the most valuable assistance that could be offered to my daughter as her other interests give priority to full year electives.
- I was very impressed with the center. There have been many changes since I was in school, however, my daughter feels that more group lessons would be a great improvement.
- I am glad that John got an opportunity to participate in this program.
- Just more information about the reading program.
- It is suggested that a questionnaire of this type should be sent to the students. Their input might be worthwhile.

DE ANZA READING CENTER

COMMENTS & SUGGESTIONS FROM PARENTS (continued)

- I truly can not answer the questions because I do not notice John's homework. John always tries to show me his work but still do not look at it. I do however, try my best to encourage him to complete his homework and to me John is always on his own trying to complete his homework along with all his other duties at home. P.S. I'm a single parent trying to raise 4 teenagers. His father.
- My child has always been a good reader. The variety of books was very helpful because it encouraged him to read different subjects not ones that were easy. Thank you very much.
- I suggest that you could be more pressed to each student, because I notice in some kids that they need more help. Thank you.
- Monthly reports would be helpful.
- Please continue the program. It's the best reading program I've seen and I hope it's still at DeAnza when my younger children will be there.
- I don't think there should be any more improving cause its already good.
- In my opinion, the reading center helped Kim. It helped her reading average. Its a good program and other schools should have it. The grades given were satisfying.
- Jackie has been a good reader. I can't fill out questionnaire due to the fact she just enrolled in De Anza two weeks ago.
- Keep up the good work!!
- I would like my nephew to learn to read and speak more English and to learn more words and their meanings. (Translated from the Spanish questionnaire.)

DE ANZA READING CENTER

STUDENT INTERVIEWS

Two groups of students were interviewed to determine their perception of the De Anza Reading Center. Students were selected randomly from each class during a school day. The first group of forty-three students was comprised of twenty-three (53%) boys and twenty (47%) girls. The second group consisted of forty-four students, twenty-eight (64%) boys and sixteen (36%) girls.

Each of the students was asked the same ten questions. Nine of the questions were selected by the Reading Center staff and one by the evaluator.

In response to the question asking the students what they like the most about the Reading Center, Group I indicated the contracts and independent work as the top choice. Both groups rated the teachers and reading (silent and for book reports) high. When asked what they liked least, 44% of Group I and 34% of Group II, were unable to identify anything that would fit in that category. For some reason World of Vocabulary (5 responses) in Group II and book reports (4 responses) in Group I were classified as "least" liked.

Ninety-eight percent of both groups indicated that they felt comfortable in talking with the Center teachers and the aides and all but 2% of Group I said that they had been helped in reading. The majority of the students interviewed felt they could talk with the counselor if they needed to do so. Most of the students who indicated that they could not talk to the counselor said that they did not know her or that they never talked to anyone about their problems.

All but one student indicated that at least some time was devoted to reading at home. In response to the evaluator's question of what types of reading materials did they like best, mystery stories were ranked first; sports stories, articles, or magazines second; and books on adventure, either fiction or non-fiction, ranked third.

Overall, the students were highly positive about the De Anza Reading Center, its materials, personnel, and their involvement in it. It is recommended that the following detailed reports be studied for further information.
